student council

The first half of the year was a little on the slow side for the council, but in January it was revised. Among some of the projects for the council were the Christmas gifts, fund raising, Goodwill and similar endeavors. For the first time the council showed enthusiasm towards other events besides its own goals and privileges. If this trend in thought keeps going, Girard will reach new heights in student government.

student court

The Student Court was not really as powerful a court as it should have been, though there were some eight hundred cases through the year. The court this year revised its rules and functions and made defined punishments. Unfortunately, however, the court handled only the smallest misdemeanors. For the court to be more effective in the future, it should add faculty members and handle all the discipline as the Judicial Board.

student center

Experimentation was the theme of Student Center's activities this year. Innovations such as the hot dog counter and the soda fountain provided the staff with ideas for future improvement. Due to several mid-season personnel changes, the center lacked the organization necessary to make the year a complete success. We hope that on the basis of our successes and failures next year's staff, with the help of Mrs. Orritt, will make the center an important part of Girard's social life as well as a "profit-making" organization.

The GIRARD NEWS began the year covering the M-Day protests with a fervor few would have anticipated a year ago. Editors Joe Pillo and Fredrick Clayton not only told it "like it is," they also managed to escape the carping scrutiny of censorship. With an altered lay-out, new balance in reporting, and a continuing Letters to the Editor controversy, the NEWS aroused the interest of everyone, but most particularly of the Seniors.

girard news

If this year's CORINTHIAN attempted to create an unusual approach to the year book, then, hopefully, the 1971 edition will be a continuation. The ideas begun by the staff of the 1970 book have been borrowed, at times enhanced, sometimes simply confused, and frequently improved.

Perhaps it is the nature of an annual to reap confusion; perhaps it is the nature of the staff to engender that confusion. Nevertheless, with a multitude of false starts, too many promises, and a fundamental belief that "somebody will do it," the 1970 CORINTHIAN has been completed.

At times, faced with either lethargy or a dearth of material, the staff looked towards the gloomy prospect of not producing a yearbook or simply presenting a list of those seniors graduating (and where they might be found). While such a directory may have had a pragmatic approach, it would not have had that inestimable quality from which memories are taken.

Since few others seemed interested in the final result, it is not so much that the editors should be held responsible for what appears here; rather, it is to their credit that they completed what is here at all.

The GIRARDIAN, as always has been a creative outlet for students who wish to demonstrate their literary skills, and experience the satisfaction of having their work published. Throughout the year the magazine staff attempted to extort worthy short stories and poems from our small student body. After much hard work the 40-page GIRARDIAN became a reality. Thanks must go to faculty sponsor Mr. Michael Wilson for his valuable advise and assistance.

photography club

An organization with one of the most demanding schedules on campus, the Photography Club is a major contributor to Girards' publications. This year's CORINTHIAN layout confronted the Club with a new challenge, that of being able to supply the book with enough really good shots of people, places, and things associated with our stay at Girard to make an interesting book.

DOUG JESSER

KEN SETZER

Quality and quantity began to lag as the publications' demands for pictures increased, and the lack of supplies, equipment, and effort became evident as the year progressed. Working right up to the deadline, the Club managed to get its photos in, just as the school year expired.

dramatic club

From late Monday night Dramatic Club meetings came the ideas for such projects as X-rated movies and three act, two hour plays (with real girls). Although these revolutionary attempts never progressed to their completed forms, the Dramatic Club did give its audience several finished productions. Late in January the slightly delayed Christmas Play, The Secret Sharer, was given. The story of six British sailors aboard a cargo ship in the Orient found favor with many of the students who were tired with the usual Friday night thrillers. The Spring Play, Bury the Dead, was an anti-war play which hit the Girard stage expressing the feelings of most of its students. The members of the club sincerely appreciate the time and effort Mr. Norman Sherman provided to make rehearsals both enjoyable and productive.

concert band

Blending talent and interest with newer, more popular music, the Concert Band this year achieved an unanticipated degree of recognition. Aside from the annual concerts, the Band also performed in a television program in April. The guidance of Mr. Robert Morrison and the capable leadership of Captain Anthony Blase were effective in producing a rewarding and successful year which will leave a favorable impression on all those who have heard the Band.

Through the past years the choir constantly seemed to be plagued with a communications gap between the director and the choir. This year the gap was bridged because of the fine personality of the new director Mr. William Riley. Mr. Riley's constant attempts to improve our Girard Choir should not go unheralded. The members of the Choir were willing to give up their free time, and they worked hard to give better concerts and performances.

A lack of interest hindered this year's broadcasts of WGC, but the organization did function successfully. The efforts of a few compensated for the lack of interest by many to produce the entertaining Monday morning programs. WGC brightened many a "blue" Monday morning, and we will regard it as a memorable and enjoyable facet of our Girard life.

After several years of inactivity, the Explorer Post has finally been revived. As a result of hard work put forth by James McGrath, Dave Riddle, and Eric DeWalt many programs have been started. One fine example of this is the exchange program with a Senior Girl Scout Troop. In order that the organization may function successfully, responsibility rests on future members.
